Zionist Regime Bombs Hospital in Kermanshah

TEHRAN -- An Israeli strike in western Iran on Monday heavily damaged a hospital, martyring at least 45 people.

At least 224 people have been martyred by Israeli strikes on Iran, including top military commanders, nuclear scientists and civilians. The Fars news agency released a video of a hospital in Kermanshah city showing shattered glass, collapsed ceilings, and extensive damage in patient rooms. "Following the Zionist criminal regime's attack on a nearby workshop in Kermanshah city, Farabi Hospital also suffered serious damage," the Tasnim news agency reported.

Pakistanis March in Solidarity With Iran

ISLAMABAD (Dispatches) – Hundreds of supporters of the Islamic Revolution and the Resistance Front in Lahore participated in a rally in solidarity with Iran, and condemned the Israeli aggression against the Islamic Republic.

The participants marched from the Punjab State Parliament to the U.S. Consulate General, holding flags of Iran, Pakistan, the Resistance Front, and pictures of the martyred commanders of the Islamic Revolutio Guards Corps (IRGC), condemning the Israeli regime's terrorist attacks on Iran.

Chanting slogans of "Death to Israel" and "Death to America," the marchers condemned the silence of the international community regarding Israel's aggression against regional countries, especially Iran, as a source of inspiration for the axis of resistance and the complicity of America and the Western Front with Israel.

Expressing satisfaction with the principled positions of the Pakistani government in supporting the Islamic Republic of Iran and aligning itself with the supporters of the Quds fighters, the speakers emphasized that Iran is the center of power in the resistance movement and that the best support and cooperation with Iran at this time is what the Islamic nation, especially Pakistan, deserves.

Allamah Sayed Javad Naqavi, head of the Awakening Movement of the Ummah of Mustafa (PBUH), also paid tribute to the martyrs of the resistance front, especially the martyred commanders of the Islamic Revolution Guards Corps, in a speech to the marchers, saying: "The current situation in the region will be a warning to other countries in the region, and we must all stand with Iran against the crimes of the Zionist regime."

Addressing Pakistani government officials, he emphasized: "You must be wary of the Zionist regime's conspiracies and not allow internal unrest or self-created economic problems to weaken our positions against Israel and its supporters."

Tens of thousands of demonstrators in the Netherlands donned red clothing and marched Sunday to protest the Dutch government's policy toward Israel, exceeding the turnout for a similar event in May.

Protesters walked a 3-mile (5-kilometer) loop around the center of The Hague to symbolically create the red line they say the government has failed to draw to halt Israel's campaign in Gaza.

"I don't want to be complicit in these horrendous crimes happening there and I want to speak out," protester Marin Koning told The Associated Press.

The human rights groups and aid agencies — including Amnesty International, Save the Children and Doctors Without Borders — that organized the march estimated the peaceful crowd at more than 150,000 people. Local media put the numbers closer to 100,000.

In neighboring Belgium, around 75,000 people, many of them also clad in red, hit the streets in the capital Brussels, police said. Several rallies have been held to draw attention to Israel's actions in Gaza, but Sunday's was the biggest rally so far.

The Dutch protest sent a "clear signal," according to Marjon Rozema of Amnesty International Netherlands. Dutch officials must "act now, at both the national and international level, to increase the pressure on the Israeli regime," she said in a statement.

As during the first Red Line protest in May, the march took the crowds past the Peace Palace, headquarters of the United Nations' International Court of Justice, where last year judges ordered Israel to do all it can to prevent death, destruction and any acts of genocide in Gaza.

The event takes place weeks after the country's ruling four-party coalition collapsed, leaving the Netherlands with a caretaker government when it hosts a summit of NATO leaders at the end of June.

The European Union's top diplomat, meanwhile, convened an emergency meeting of the 27-nation bloc's foreign ministers on Tuesday to discuss the conflict between Israel and Iran.

IRGC's Warning to Zionists:

'Leave Occupied Territories'

Settlers watch a destroyed building at a site in Tel Aviv hit by a missile fired from Iran on June 14.

TEHRAN -- The Islamic Revolution Guards Corps (IRGC) on Monday launched a fresh wave of missile strikes – the eighth since Friday – against the occupied territories as part of "Operation True Promise III."

At approximately 4:50 a.m. local time on Monday, hundreds of missiles were fired from Iran toward strategic and sensitive targets in Tel Aviv and Haifa.

The retaliatory operation, which was launched on Friday, is being carried out under the code name "Ya Ali ibn Abi Talib," coinciding with the blessed occasion of Eid al-Ghadir.

Sirens blared across the occupied territories as Israeli authorities ordered settlers to immediately seek refuge in underground shelters, according to Israeli media reports.

Videos circulating on social media captured Iranian missiles breaching multiple layers of Israel's air defense systems to strike their designated targets.

Among the sites hit, the Haifa power plant was seen engulfed in flames following an Iranian missile strike, as shown in a widely shared video.

Located in the northern occupied territories, Haifa power plant is a critical component of the Zionist entity's energy infrastructure and has come under a series of attacks since October 7, 2023.

The plant, guarded by the much-hyped Arrow 3 air defense system, was attacked and destroyed by an Iranian missile attack, according to Israeli media.

Bazan oil refinery complex, the largest oil refinery in the occupied territories that processes approximately 200,000 barrels of oil per day, also reportedly sustained extensive damage to pipelines.

According to the Israeli media reports, the occupation army called on settlers not to film the locations where missiles made impact and created scenes of devastation.

A massive power outage was reported across central parts of the occupied territories shortly after Iranian missiles struck their designated targets, plunging several areas into darkness.

One of the missiles reportedly hit a high-rise building in Ramat Gan, causing severe structural damage. In Petah Tikva, municipal officials confirmed that a missile struck a building there as well, prompting emergency and rescue teams to rush to the scene to provide medical assistance.

In a jibe aimed at Israeli prime minister Benjamin Netanyahu, Israeli media quoted a settler saying, "When we emerge from the shelters after this wave of missile strikes ends, we'll find the 'complete victory' Netanyahu promised proudly displayed across Tel Aviv's shattered squares."

Preliminary estimates indicate that at least eight buildings have been destroyed in the latest wave

At Least 338 Gaza Aid Seekers Killed by Zionist Forces

GAZA CITY (Dispatches) -- Israeli attacks on Palestinians seeking aid in the Gaza Strip have killed at least 338 civilians, according to Palestinian health officials.

In the most recent series of assaults on civilians at aid delivery points, at least 20 Palestinians were killed and more than 200 left wounded around dawn on Monday.

The besieged enclave's population is grappling with starvation, as a result of an Israeli blockade on essential food and water supplies entering the territory.

Israel and its allies in Washington have only allowed the controversial U.S.-run Gaza Humanitarian Foundation (GHF) to distribute essential supplies to Palestinians.

However, massacres of those seeking aid by Israeli soldiers and GHF-aligned mercenaries have been a daily occurrence.

The Palestinian Health Ministry in Gaza reported that 50 people were left in critical condition in Monday's mass killing, which happened as Israeli troops opened fire directly on Palestinians gathered at US-Israeli distribution points.

"We call on all concerned parties to work to find alternative mechanisms for distributing aid without causing the death of hungry people or causing serious injuries in such large numbers," the ministry said in a press release.

In addition to the dead, at least 2,831 people have been wounded and nine missing individuals at aid distribution points.

Philippe Lazzarini, the commissioner-general of the UN agency for Palestinian refugees (UNRWA), criticized the new aid delivery structure established in a joint collaboration between the U.S. and Israel, describing it as a "lethal distribution system".

The killings form a new mode of atrocity in Gaza with deaths also occurring as a result of Israeli bombardment and shooting.

According to sources who spoke to Al Jazeera, at least 43 people were killed by the Israeli military on Monday morning.

The total death toll from Israel's war on Gaza now stands at 55,432 people and 128,923 injuries.

In late May, Israeli prime minister Benjamin Netanyahu announced a plan to allow limited aid into Gaza and turn over distribution efforts to the U.S.-run Gaza Humanitarian Foundation (GHF).

With Gaza experiencing a deepening humanitarian crisis as a result of Israel's months-long siege and continued bombardment, the Israel-U.S. aid initiative has only exacerbated the suffering in the enclave.

"Tragedies go on unabated while attention shifts elsewhere," Lazzarini said in a statement.

"Restrictions on bringing in aid from the UN including UNRWA continue despite an abundance of assistance ready to be moved into Gaza," he explained, adding that severe shortages of fuel are crippling delivery of critical services.

"Killings and wars will breed more wars and bloodshed. Civilians will always suffer first and suffer most. Political will, leadership and courage are overdue and needed more than ever.

"It's time for long lasting peace in Gaza and across the region."

As Gaza endures heavy bombardment, a renewed communication blackout has hampered emergency services and medical assistance throughout the blockaded enclave.

On Thursday, all internet and landline telecommunications services were completely cut off when Israel launched a direct attack on the last remaining main fibre optic route connecting Gaza.

In a statement, the Government Media Office described the action as "a crime aimed at obscuring the truth and deepening the humanitarian catastrophe".

"The widespread and recurring interruption of communications and the internet cannot be considered a technical or accidental failure.

"Rather, it is a deliberate and premeditated crime aimed at isolating the Gaza Strip from the outside world, obscuring the truth, and depriving citizens of the most basic necessities of life, safety, communication and assistance."

The blockaded enclave's southern and central governorate were affected by the destruction, joining Gaza City and the northern region, which have been disconnected since the beginning of the week.

Following a partial return to telecommunication and internet services over the weekend, renewed disruptions - caused by resumed Israeli military action - were reported on Monday across central and south Gaza.
